Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 01 Apr 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny spells before turning cold and unsettled on Sunday.

Today:
Early patchy cloud clears away into the daytime to leave a dry day with plenty of sunny spells. Breezy, and with temperatures returning back to average. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
With mostly clear skies across the region and winds easing the night will be chilly with a frost forming in some places by dawn. Minimum temperature 0 deg C (32 deg F).

Friday:
Clear skies and plenty of sunshine in the morning, but with some patchy cloud moving in during the afternoon. Temperatures around average for the time of year. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Bright and fine Saturday, with overnight frost and fog. Then turning unsettled into Sunday and Monday with showers and cold temperatures moving in from the north, turning wintry at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.